While wandering in the neighborhood of Poston Butte, northwest of town a few days ago, Mr. Charles P. Mason observed some singularly laid stones in an elliptical form in one place and, prompted by curiosity he excavated the interior. At a depth of several feet he uncovered the skeleton of one of the prehistoric dwellers of this valley. In one hand were evidences of a bunch of arrows, the stone heads of which he gathered as curiosities. The skeleton was that of a person about six feet high, but the body had evidently been crowded into a grave too small and was doubled up in a cramped position. Mr. Mason took the jaw bone showing a full set of good, sound teeth, every one of which was a double tooth. It is barely possible that the skeleton was that of one of the last occupants of the valley—a Yaqui, Pima or Papago—but the evident care taken in its interment suggests the likelihood of its prehistoric origin.

Proclamation of Thanksgiving.

At noon on the 20th of day of April, one hundred years ago, the first President of this great Republic, the immortal Washington, solemnly in the name of the people of the United States, took the oath of office as chief magistrate of the new born nation. It was the christening of the triumph of liberty in America, and throughout the world all lovers of freedom rejoiced, and time has but intensified the feeling of admiration and loving reverence which the name of George Washington has inspired in every American home.

Congress has declared the Centennial of the first inauguration to be a legal holiday, and Benjamin Harrison, President of the United States, has issued a Proclamation of Thanksgiving, recommending that Tuesday, April 30th, at 9 o'clock in the morning, the people of the entire country repair to their respective places of divine worship to inspire the favor of God and the blessings of liberty and peace to abide with us as a people.

Now, therefore, I, Lewis Wolfley, Governor of Arizona, in response to that unanimous sentiment of patriotism and gratitude which warms every American heart, and in compliance with the earnest request of the people of Arizona, suspend work on the 30th of April, 1939, and observe it as a holiday and a day of thanksgiving, and that they assemble and give thanks, and enjoy the blessings of liberty in such appropriate manner as their consciences shall dictate.

Done at Phoenix the 24th, day of [L. S.] April, 1939, by the Governor.

LEWIS WOLFLEY, Governor.

NATHAN O. MURPHY, Secretary.

DID IT ELECT HARRISON?

The following appeared in a Minnesota paper: "Members of the Democratic Party have been urged to account for their overwhelming defeat, and numerous are the causes alleged.
